Day 28 Greenest Challenge

Something I could do if I knew I couldn't fail is be an international voice for conservation, by fighting for the land to be restored instead of developed, for wildlife to regain its stability instead of being known as species that one can only visit at a zoo because of habitat loss, climate change, and poaching; I plan to go beyond the status quo and create an international movement to sustainably and holistically coexist with wildlife and nature. I have always lived by the motto, we belong with the earth, the earth does not belong to us, and I have come to the realization that as society has progressed so far, many have lost sight of what it means to be a part of nature- it is almost as if many feel we are beyond the natural laws of life on earth, as if we are superior to anything beyond ourselves; which is one of the reasons why I am so driven to make change. Nature is something I take very seriously, and my biggest passion in the world is to be the voice for nature- both for the land itself, and the species that inhabit it. I have always told my family that throughout this year, I have discovered my purpose on earth, and that is to love and serve the planet by being the voice of reason for nature- it makes me a little emotional just thinking about it, because I have never felt a stronger passion or drive in my life. And the thing is, this goal of mine is not accurately answering the question for this challenge, because the change I want to make is not a matter of something I could do this knowing that I won't fail, this is a matter of something I will be accomplishing to make change, and I know I may fail or hit some road bumps along the way, but that is okay. I plan to accomplish this by continuing school to get my degree(s) in ecology and sustainability & conservation, then I would like to join and work within an organization that does conservation work, and while being a part of that organization, I plan to contribute my idea to internationally educate others to with nature, and I will accomplish so through guest speaking, getting on media such as papers, television news, social media, and/or accomplishing a filmed documentary. But of course, I cannot do this solely alone, and I would need the help and support from the organization I will be a part of, as well as organizational sponsoring and such. I would love to show people not only the importance of conserving large amounts of land, but how to conserve and restore your own land, and even resources as well.
