Cut emissions!
Reform agriculture!
Quick!

Email to senator Todd Young: I am scared senator Young. I am scared because myself, a high school senior in Bloomington, and the rest of my generation are standing to inherit a world perpetuated by the potential consequences of climate change. As I hope you are aware, with our current rate of emissions climate change stands to potentially affect the lives of over a billion people on this planet by 2050. Effects include but are not limited to the destruction of ecosystems, extreme flooding, the acidification of the ocean, drought, famine, and more regular and extreme weather. It should be accepted as a fact that this is an extremely pressing issue of the utmost importance not only for our nation but for the entire world. The United Nations has in fact issued warnings of this potential catastrophe written by over a hundred of the top scientists from across the globe. It should be apparent that the facts about this are real and continue to exist whether or not we decide to acknowledge them. We need to be making a drastic change to the way we function as a society at an extremely rapid pace so that we might be able to prevent a disaster. I beg for you to support the government enforcing the cutting of carbon emissions and to move our nation to renewable energy sources. Not only this but I also implore you to back putting taxes on meat and animal products for they are extremely taxing to the environment and in many cases, unsustainable. I realize that this is expensive and an extremely difficult change to make, but I believe that there is no price on the value of human life and that people have a right to a future. I want to become part of a world where I can feel confident that my future is secure. I want to become part of a world where I don't have to be scared to have children because I don't want them to enter into a world of suffering. I want to become part of a world where we put people before money. Please senator Young. Please do what is right.
