My Eco Hero

Brittany Mondloch

- This is one of the Hall Directors on the campus that I go to and she is also one of my closest friends on campus. She has been my mentor as well for green advocate on campus and has pushed me to do many great things as a person and as an environmental socialist. She will still be a hall director for another year and I will luckily have the pleasure of working with her this upcoming year again. She has really showed me to stick with project green challenge and made me feel like I am always doing a great job with any green promotion I am doing on campus. Brittany herself does so much with upcycling and gotten a lot of awards with clubs and different events on campus. She works so hard as a person and I don't know how she does it, but it is inspirational. I learned recently about her upcycling projects in her apartment and it was amazing to see the amount of sustainable things she has done considering more than half the stuff in their was all upcycled. She knows so much about how to go green and how to promote it for all and make it fun. Brittany has faced mostly just time management difficulties which I can completely get, but I don't know anything too personal about any issues. She has just gone above and beyond though keeping a positive energy throughout all she does...

What resonated me from my experience with her was strictly her motivation and push to others on doing what they love. Most people never understood why I was majoring in Accounting and Law and not pursuing anything with it. I changed it to environmental law but it was too late and now I have to finish my degree and stick to what I am doing now. My family didn't get that and said I should stick to Accounting, but it is not my passion. Promoting sustainable efforts and positive energy is, and Brittany understood that and she sees how passionate I am even during PGC. She makes me want to pursue my dream of this and do what I can to make the world a better place. There is no greater gift I can ask for than having someone support your dream and believing in your future.

Questions I would ask?

What made you get into sustainable efforts and what drives you to push others to be involved in it?

When days get rough and you feel like quitting, what makes you keep going?

What is something you wish was implemented on campus to be more sustainable?
