Caption: Access to the outdoors is something that should be universally available. One way to expand the accessibility of the outdoors is to create hiking groups that are intended for certain minorities to participate in, such as those with disabilities.

"we will be heard". these four words seem simple at first, but they embody an important cause. access to the outdoors and environmental recreational activities should be available to all communities; since our planet belongs to everyone equally. this post by @diversify.vanlife represents the importance of ensuring proper access to the outdoors to ALL, regardless of race, ethnicity, gender, orientation, and more. we were inspired by this post because of its effective and empowering message that the outdoors should be universally accessible.
