Share two things that left an impression.

- 1) Commonly thought to raise the price of products, fair trade actually just cuts out the middlemen in the operation that would have left producers with lower incomes.
- 2) The products you chose to purchase can have a huge impact on the community to which they originate from. Choosing Fair Trade products for the benefit of the developing countries where they are produced can help them support their education systems, supplies for farmers, and much more.
