Rights of Nature Movement

Environmental law organizations, such as Earth Law Center and Earthjustice, have actively worked on cases and policy proposals that seek to establish legal rights for nature because nature has its own value. These efforts have led to fostering legal and cultural changes, spurring community engagement, and influencing environmental policy discussions.

United States Compared To The World

Compared to the rest of the world, the United States has been relatively slow in embracing the rights of nature movement. While countries like New Zealand, Ecuador, and Mexico have enacted laws recognizing nature's legal rights, the U.S. has been more focused on traditional environmental policies.
