Poem

Let's care for water, for it's the essence of life,
Let's think about what it takes to obtain it, rife.
It flows through plants like a serene river's tide,
More than a liquid, it's a gift, open wide.

Let's tend to the Earth, which grants us its boon,
The green trees that provide oxygen to the sun and moon,
Let's protect nature with a fervent tune,
For in its beauty, we find redemption soon.

Let's care for the animals, noble and fair,
Some offer us companionship, love to share,
Let's love them, protect them, show we care,
In their presence, we find peace beyond compare.

Water is life, a treasure we must hold dear,
The trees give us oxygen, crystal clear,
Plants nourish us, help us persevere,
Animals are our companions, making life appear.

In our hands lies the choice we must make,
Vote for life, for preservation's sake,
Change our focus, a new path to take,
Only then a transformation we'll awake.
