I think one important change our Hamden Clean and Green committee can make to address the climate crisis is to spread environmental awareness in different high schools and recruit more young people to make a difference. I believe if more people know about the Hamden Clean and Green committee and how broad the influence of this committee is in our society, they are willing to align with the organization and spread awareness to protect the environment. To do this, the staff can appoint young ambassadors in different high schools and let them recruit people through their clubs. The committee can connect the leaders in different schools through the Slack platform and give some great suggestions about what kinds of activities help to mitigate climate change or raise awareness. This makes the process more efficient and gives an opportunity for environmentalists in Hamden to talk with each other. In addition, it is important to review the application on time. I have applied to be part of Hamden Clean and Green on March 13, but I have never heard back from the committee about whether I successfully enroll in.

The young people are creative and passionate once they find they are able to make changes. May I ask if I had a chance to meet with you or the leaders in Hamden Clean and Green to talk more about making a change in the community? Thanks for reading this email and hope you have a nice day!
